

Forget the traditional golf cart, maybe you can teach Tonto to caddy for you

A life spent with animals is a good life, and combined with golfing, hiking and boating, living out west is looking promising. Take Tobiano, for instance. Situated at Six Mile Ranch, overlooking Kamloops Lake, in British Columbia, Tobiano (tobianoliving.com) is part of a dreamy $500-million development that will include 1,000 lakeview homes, a hotel, pedestrian village, marina and equestrian centre

B.C. RECREATIONAL

— and 17,000 acres of back country for you and your horse to gambol through. (But if the wilds are a little too much for the city slicker in you, there will also be a network of landscaped bridle paths.) Lot prices start at $259,900. Tobiano's golf-course architect, Tom McBroom, has been cited in Bob Weeks's golf blog as having designed "the best new course in Canada. Ever. Period." Let's just hope the horses learn to differentiate between "Fore!" and "Whoa!"

National Post

